THE MODERN DRAMA.

It is a Dress-Cost Affair and Lacks the Gorgeous of Yore.

The other night a man went to the theater who had not been for years, and he couldn't make it out, says Pearson's Weekly. First of all he missed the simple village youth, the virtuous hero who was wont to take the first prize in the horticultural society, or else win the guerdon at quarts, or something or other in the rustic revels. But worst of all he missed the dear old-fashioned villain, and although this play had a tremendous villain in it our friend was not impressed with him a bit. He sighs thus:

"I came away again, sadly disappointed. The play was not what I expected. I shall go no more to the playhouse. The rainy days of the drama are over. The theater has fallen into the sea and yellow fifth act, and there is no health in it! The theater has followed the path of literature and the good old things are changed. I beheld a lot of well people in evening dress on the stage. They spoke quickly to one another, very much as people do off the stage, and in very much the same sort of language. This is not what I want when I go to the theater."

"What is the theatrical villain of today?" he is a real, good, old-fashioned villain? Does he ever drag a helpless maiden from the domiciliary roof of her ancestors by the hair? No, sir. Does he ever say to the hero: "Say one word and thou art food for the wolves?" Does he ever grab the heroine by the wrist, drag her down the stage in three strides, slam her down in a big chair, bend over her and whisper feebly: "I love thee, maiden, but, by my soul, I love thee! Thou shalt be mine! Yield or by heaven I'll—"

"That's all I know of that speech, because 'By heaven I'll' is the cue for the maiden to spring up, and throwing the villain into the sea, crosses the stage, to say: 'Unhand me, ruffian! And know, that rather than mate with such as thou, I'd cast myself from yonder battlement into the foaming flood beneath!'"

"And does the villain then say: 'Now, by heavens, I like thy spirit! I love thee all the more for it?'"

"And does the maiden say: 'Merciful powers, protect me?'"

"And does the door open and the hero rush in, armed with a good, blunt broadsword? And then do he and the villain fight, and down the stage, with rights, shoulder blades, cut and thrust? Oh, no. These things have given way to swallow-tailed coats and high collars, and the villain is now as big a swell as any fellow in the show. Oh, for the good old palmy days of the drama, when the broadsword ruled and there was gore! The modern drama is too much like ice cream after a heavy dinner—cold and unsatisfying."

SERVANTS ON INSTALMENTS.

It Takes Six in Guatemala to Do the Work of One in the States.

The American woman, when she grumbles at the general servitude, doesn't know when she is well off. If she could spend a year at housekeeping in Guatemala she would come back to the United States and pass the rest of her life in peace and contentment, says the New York Journal.

In Guatemala the servants are either Indians or half-breeds. They will live on black beans and tortillas, and as to wages, they are content for a month with what a servant girl receives here. But no American housekeeper would feel inclined to charge a servant board. You hire a Guatemalan woman, for instance, as a cook. Then you must hire a man to keep her fire going. If he is away, the cook will let her fire go out sooner than debate her dignity by putting on more fuel. A third servant must be furnished to put the crude articles of food into shape for handling by the cook. A fourth is needed to do all the carrying. Still another must do the washing.

Altogether, a half-dozen servants are needed to get an ordinary breakfast for three or four persons. A bright, intelligent, sturdy servant in this country would accomplish the same feat all by herself in an hour or less. It is comparatively inexpensive to maintain a household of twelve or fifteen servants in Guatemala, but they are a terrible trial to an American woman.

Youngest Son Favored.

"If one looks about him almost anywhere in Maine," says an observing resident of that state, "he will find that in the matter of descent of property we have unconsciously put in force or have effected just the opposite of the English rule of primogeniture. Where there are a number of children in a family it is almost always the youngest son that stays with the old folks and inherits the homestead. Where I live I can point out dozens of such instances in the families I know, and I cannot now recall a single instance where what a servant girl receives here."

Origin of Visiting Cards.

We owe the invention of visiting cards to the Chinese. So long ago as the period of the Tung dynasty (618-907) visiting cards were known to be in common use in China, and that is also the date of the introduction of the "red silken cords" which figure so conspicuously on the engagement cards of that country.

Cat's-eye Stone, Ancient and Modern.

The cat's-eye stone, now prized as an ornament, is a very different thing from the ancient cat's eye, or cystone of India, an agate cut so as to show the so-called eye or eyes. It is supposed by some that this latter was used as money in many parts of India four centuries ago, and specimens found to-day have an interest of numismatists.

Temporary Change of Lodgings.

At Monte Carlo a gambler had won the maximum at "rouge et noir" three times in succession.

"There's a fellow running off with a splendid haul of bank notes!" said a spectator.

"Oh!" carelessly interjected the croupier, "that makes no difference to the bank. It is merely a bit of our money sleeping out for the night!"—Le Petit Nicols.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—The bears carried over everything with a rush today. Compared with yesterday's closing prices wheat is 1 cent lower, corn 1/2 cent, oats 1/2 cent, and soybeans 1/2 cent.

Bradstreet's increase of the visible supply was a weakening factor in wheat and free selling did the rest, other markets following wheat. The first transactions of the day in wheat were at substantially the same prices as ruled at the close at yesterday's session. The receipts at Chicago, Minneapolis and Duluth were only moderate, but the total receipts at the primary western markets were again slightly over 1,000,000 bushels.

Foreign markets were generally quiet, the exception being at Paris. Telegrams from Duluth this morning reported 400,000 bushels as the amount sold yesterday, 500,000 bushels of which was to New York markets and 100,000 bushels to the Baltimore trade. Negotiations for further lots were said to be in progress at Duluth today and Minneapolis early in the day reported a good demand for cash wheat at 50 cents. Up to 12 o'clock the business done was small. The local crowd was rather inclined to sell and the orders from outside were chiefly to sell December and buy May at 5 cent difference. The tendency was slightly downward, but not until Bradstreet's visible supply statement came out to hand did any marked inclination to sell become general. The latter reports showed 1,532,000 bushels as the net increase in the world last week. A year instead of a decrease of 3,000,000 bushels, an amount there was a shortage of 3,040,000 bushels. There was a rush to sell, however, when today's figures were under the hammer, and the market was fairly sparingly at the opening at 50 1/2 cents, declined for a moment to 50 1/4 cents. The bears used the lever given them by a weak corn market, and the increase in Bradstreet's visible supply to impress their views upon the unwilling bulls and in an excited struggle to find buyers in the last ten minutes of the session, the price tumbled rapidly to 50 cents to 50 1/4 cents, and closed at 50 1/4 cents.

Corn opened firm on the confirmation of yesterday's small trade. The local crowd was generally bearish on the unsatisfactory condition of the shipping demand. The elevator people were looking for buyers, but had sold sparingly at the opening at 50 1/2 cents, declined for a moment to 50 1/4 cents.
